Annual General Meeting and Annual Debate

Link's 2013 AGM and Annual Debate took place on Wednesday 4 December at the Zoological Society of London.

This year, our expert panel addressed the question: UK natural environment: evidence-based policy or policy-based evidence? The debate involved a thought-provoking and wide-ranging discussion around the factors influencing policy development, including the ethical, social, political and scientific considerations. The British Ecological Society kindly sponsored the drinks reception that followed the debate.

From 2014, the Biodiversity Working Group will become a 'virtual group', meaning that it will continue to exist but will function without a Chair or Vice Chair. Link would like to say a big thank you to Nicola Hutchinson who has chaired the group for the last five years. The group will continue to engage with external groups where appropriate, and will look to embed much of its work within Link's other working groups.

Link members noted the publication of the next Natural Capital Committee report as a key milestone in 2014, and stressed the need to engage with HM Treasury. Members also urged that the group gives a balanced presentation of offsetting in any briefings to parliamentarians.

Judicial Review - Proposals for Further Reform

Link has submitted evidence to the Ministry of Justice's consultation on further reform to Judicial Review (JR). JR provides an effective mechanism for challenging the decisions, acts or omissions of public bodies to ensure that they are lawful.

In its response Link expresses concern that the Government's proposals represent a mistaken belief that JR is nothing more than an irritant to economic growth and recovery and asserts that they are a disproportionate response to perceived problems. Link also points out that the proposals will prevent compliance with EU and international environmental law and warns that it is only a matter of time before the UK will again find itself before the Aarhus Compliance Committee and the Court of Justice of the European Union.

Draft Aarhus National Implementation Report

Link has responded to Defra's consultation on its Draft Aarhus National Implementation Report (NIR). The Aarhus Convention is a United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) treaty which provides access to information, public participation in decision making and access to justice in environmental matters. The UK is required to produce a NIR every three years, outlining the procedures and mechanisms facilitating the implementation of the Aarhus Convention, and providing examples of the practical steps being taken to implement the requirements of the Convention in the UK.

Link's response, supported by 14 members, points out that the NIR fails to provide an accurate reflection of the implementation of the Aarhus Convention in the UK, and urges the Government to amend the NIR accordingly.

Link's overarching concern is the unprecedented scale and pace of legislative and policy change in the UK and the fact that the NIR fails to reflect concerns raised by individuals and organisations struggling to keep abreast of the proposed changes or to submit properly considered responses to them. Link also points out that the NIR fails to refer to a number of both actual and proposed changes, many of which will undermine the UK's ability to comply with the Aarhus Convention. Such changes include: developments in the field of access to information; changes to public engagement in the planning regime; and proposals to reform Judicial Review.

Balance of Competences Review

In August Link coordinated a Joint Link's response to Defra's consultation on the Environment and Climate Change part of the Balance of Competences Review. The subsequent report will be published in December 2013.

Members of the group joined a meeting of the APPG Biodiversity Natural Capital sub-group, to discuss next steps and the group's priorities. Link members noted the publication of the next Natural Capital Committee report as a key milestone in 2014, and stressed the need to engage with HM Treasury. Members also urged that the group gives a balanced presentation of offsetting in any briefings to parliamentarians.

Water Bill Committee stage

The Blueprint for Water coalition was invited to give evidence to the Public Bill Committee, which is currently undertaking a line by line scrutiny of the Bill. Following our evidence session, the Blueprint wrote to Committee members to reiterate our key points and to provide them with detailed briefings on the specific amendments we are seeking. The Blueprint's evidence, and that given by others, can be viewed on Parliament TV.

Amendments to Bill

The Government has tabled a number of amendments to the Bill, including one that requires applicants for new Water Supply Licences to consult with the Environment Agency, and one which requires the Environment Agency to give their opinion when the decisions on whether to allow a bulk transfer of water between suppliers is referred to Ofwat.
